THE PROBLEM - Short Selling

What is Short Selling?

1. Definition: Short Selling is the act of using a brokerage account to borrow shares under the arrangement that you will return them at a specified date in the future. The shares are instantly sold on the open market by the short seller, which creates downward price pressure. The short seller makes money when the price of the stock falls. If the stock inevitably falls, then the short seller can choose to cover their short position by buying the shares at the now lower price and then returning the borrowed shares to their broker.
2. Effects on Stocks: Many companies experience massive downward pressure when enough of their shares are sold short. This can cause these companies to experience falling share prices for extended periods of time. Ultimately, this can rattle retail investors and cause them to sell their shares at losses, which causes more downward price pressure for the share price.
3. Effects on Companies: Companies who experience massive short volume experience a decrease in their ability to raise funding through the issuance of stocks and bonds. This inability to raise capital can result in the company having issues surviving through periods of instability in their profitability. Consequently, the hedge funds play a large role in determining which companies survive and which go bankrupt. This causes massive job losses and hurts the 99% of people who are less fortunate while enriching the 1% who already have more than enough.
4. Hedge Funds and Large Institutional Manipulation: Who is at fault for the issues companies are plagued with because of short selling? To put it bluntly, Hedge Funds and Large Institutions (there is some retail interest in shorting stocks as well, but it is a drop in the bucket compared to the amount of equity that these large institutions short stocks with). These large entities have massive amounts of funding to endlessly short these companies' shares into the dirt. They even use a process called "naked shorting," which is essentially selling a fake (electronically manufactured) share. This share is not a part of the company's actual share float. It dilutes the share pool and distorts the true price of the stock.

5. SEC Oversight: The SEC is very aware of these manipulative tactics, but does very little to help the retail investor and companies who are shorted. They may slap small fines on various parties, but very rarely does this result in investigations and arrests. Typically, the fines that are paid are a drop in the bucket compared to the amount made from shorting. The fines do nothing to discourage hedge funds from continuing their manipulative tactics.
6. Broker: Simply put, the broker creates the naked shares (fake share) and lends it to the short seller at their discretion. The broker does this because they make money from the interest attached to the fake shares.
7. Winners of Short Selling: The 1%. The individuals who already have so much are the ones who directly benefit from these corrupt manipulative tactics that hurt only small retailers and already struggling companies.
8. Losers of Short Selling: The 99%. The small investor has almost no power to fight these tactics and almost always end up with the short end of the stick. They lose hard earned money when they already had so little to lose, and as we mentioned prior, the job losses to various communities is devastating to many families. Struggling Companies, communities, homes, and people's lives are destroyed.

THE SOLUTION

1. Retail money has come together in some instances (like GME) to expose the short sellers over-leveraged positions by buying, holding, and not selling. When enough buying and holding occurs, there can be a resulting short squeeze. During a short squeeze, a stock can infinitely increase in price until people sell and all short positions are closed. A massive transfer of wealth from the 1% to the 99% occurs in these rare instances. Unfortunately, there is not enough money in the Retailers pocket to expose every overly shorted stock on the market.
2. Our solution is to create a deflationary currency that has retail support whose price floor continuously rises based upon reflection, LP, and Burn. Additionally, we want to bridge the gap of knowledge and investing between the crypto world and stock world. Many investors hold one or the other but do not hold both assets. Therefore, our coin can segway investors in heavily shorted stocks to the crypto market when they buy our coin. Also, it will segway cryptocurrency investors to the stock market because they will become informed about advantageous opportunities for short squeezes. (WE WILL NEVER GIVE ADVICE ABOUT SPECIFIC STOCKS TO INVEST IN AS WE ARE NOT

FINANCIAL ADVISORS, BUT WE WILL DO OUR BEST TO INFORM INVESTORS IN SCENARIOS WHERE THERE IS A LOT OF MANIPULATION AND SHORT SELLING).

3. Furthermore, our tokenomics and Tax Fee Structure will support the cause as well. Specifically, there will be a 5% redistribution fee paid to all holders on every transaction. There will be a 3% transaction fee that will auto lock in LP on Pancake Swap. 2% of each transaction will go directly to ShortSqueeze Coin's own Charity Foundation, where the funds will be divided as follows: 1% to legal fees for retail investors, and 1% to fund pushes for market transparency. Lastly, there will be periodic burns based upon community achievements.
4. With massive adoption of our coin the price will increase exponentially, and it will offer investors immense gains. If our investors choose to move some of their gains from ShortSqueezeCoin to heavily shorted stocks they have learned about while investing in our coin, then that is their right. We are NOT giving financial advice to invest in any of these overly shorted stocks or our coin as they all carry significant risk and should be reviewed based on your own financial situation. With enough adoption we can raise enough funds for retailers to finally have money to stand up against the corruption that Elites use against us via short-selling. The end result can be more frequent short squeezes in a shorter amount of time. Ultimately, as shorting becomes less profitable because more and more investors from the 99% are informed about short squeezes and how to win the war against short sellers, shorting will cease to exist because the risk will no longer be worth the reward. Just like with a short squeeze, all we have to do is buy and hold.
